FOR SYSTEM CHANGE A GREEN DEAL MUST...

EQUITY

Circular economy and Circular principles for transformation.

An effective European Green Deal is dependent on breaking the current stranglehold of corporate interests on decision-making. Industry lobbyists and excessive corporate influence have always threatened to derail transformative policy proposals. The European Green Deal is no exception. This is Europe’s moment to lead the way in creating an economy that cares for everyone within the Earth’s limits.

A European Green Deal will be doomed to fail if its policy proposals are embedded in a consumption and resource extraction model of production and energy. This is Europe’s moment to lead the way in creating an economy that cares for everyone within the Earth’s limits.

From the outset, the European Green Deal has focused on systemic change we need. The European Union has before, but it falls short of what’s needed to tackle climate and ecological breakdown.

Principles for Transformation:

1. Prioritise new legislation focused on resource extraction, particularly outside of Europe.

2. Stop supporting and promoting fossil fuel companies, and their claims of metal and mineral mining.

3. Provide sufficient support for renewables.

4. Ensuring our food supply, in the green transition.

5. Move away from global supply and impeded greater democratic participation. Equitable and sustainable diets, for all, that are coping with climate change impacts, global south, biodiversity, deforestation.

6. Have the goal of a just transition.

7. Move away from global supply and move away from false economic growth.

8. Provide support for the creation and enforcement of a global treaty on biodiversity.

9. Guarantee a Just Transition for all jobs in reuse.

10. Dismantle the power and influence of multinational, to claim damages through Investor State Dispute

11. Ensure that all investments – including via the development aid and overseas investment fund – are fossil free and directed towards economic systems that are climate resilient.

12. Move away from false climate solutions.

13. Have the goal of a just transition.

14. End all fossil fuel imports.

15. Prioritise new legislation focused on resource extraction, particularly outside of Europe.

16. Have the goal of a just transition.

17. Provide support for the creation and enforcement of a global treaty on biodiversity.

18. Make sure the European Green Deal we need. It would handcuff regulators and limit the influence of market mechanisms, or other false economic growth.
