- Resist Fossil-fuelled Imperialism - Stand in solidarity with Latin America and Greenland!

Dear leaders of the European Union,

Europe prides itself on being a leader in upholding international law and democracy, defending human rights and being a climate champion! The EU has also been able to respond with a clear voice and robust measures to Putin's imperial ambitions and military aggression. Now, it must take an equally strong stand against Trump's.

It is a bitter truth we have to face, but US Administration is - unfortunately - no longer a good-faith partner in the historic alliance with Europe.

Trump's pledge to seize Greenland - even by force - is just one of many recent outrageous developments illustrating that the current US government is not Europe's ally.

His illegal strikes on Venezuela to take control of its oil resources represent a clear violation of international law and have only deepened an already severe democratic, social and economic crisis in the country. These actions were followed immediately by his imperial threats towards Cuba, Colombia and Mexico. Trump has also made clear his contempt for international law through his attacks on the UN, abandonment of the Paris Agreement, and the illegal and unjustifiable sanctions of European citizens (such as former EU commissioner Thierry Breton and UN Special Rapporteur Francesca Albanese).

One partner's dominance is, logically, another's subservience. In his quest for US "energy dominance," Trump pressures the EU to dilute its own climate commitments and commit to trade deals that enrich US fossil fuel companies and entrench his own power at the EU's own expense. His administration has attacked the EU's methane regulation and its Corporate Sustainability Due Diligence Directive, seeking to weaken Europe's ability to hold corporations accountable for climate and human rights harms.

It used the threat of economically devastating tariffs to ensure the EU would agree to import $750 billion of US energy products over the next three years, in particular its liquified natural gas (LNG). Apart from the fact that US LNG is worse than coal and very expensive, US LNG projects contaminate the air and water of nearby communities, increasing their risk of cancers, asthma, and other serious health harms.

As long as the EU accedes to Trump's demands, it will be switching one dangerous dependency for another, giving up its sovereignty bit by bit, losing the competitiveness battle, deepening the climate crisis which will be putting its own people's lives at even higher risk from extreme weather, and jeopardizing its ambitions to be seen as a global climate leader.

Additionally, increasing imports of US fossil fuels are projected to raise energy prices for EU households, up to one in four of whom are already unable to afford to adequately heat, cool, or light their homes, and expose the EU to greater levels of market volatility, as the US has shown that it is not a reliable trading partner.

Every Euro spent on US non-renewable energy, and every fossil fuel investment made by European companies and banks in the United States, fuels Trump's authoritarian agenda at home and his imperial ambitions abroad. The only way Europe can reach energy independence and free itself from outside pressures is by implementing a just transition away from fossil fuels and relying on energy sufficiency/efficiency and homegrown renewable energy. Done well, this can support decent jobs and sound local economies.

It is past time for the EU to draw a line against Trump's fossil-fueled imperialism. We, international and European civil society organizations and individuals, call on the EU to courageously oppose Trump's agenda, and defend people, our planet, and the rule of law.

The EU should:

- Stand in solidarity with the Latin American nations threatened by the United States and other manifestations of imperial force, and to stand against all forms of oppression affecting local communities, as in the specific case of Venezuela.
- Stand in solidarity with Greenland. It is up to its people - and only them - to decide on their future.
- Put forth a motion at the United Nations that condemns the US's blatant violations of international law.
- Immediately cancel negotiations and implementation of the US-EU trade deal
- Engage with EU Member States to renew the European Green Deal and establish a binding roadmap for the phase-out of fossil gas (in particular US LNG)
- Engage with EU Member States to appropriately terminate existing and prevent new long-term contracts for the import or financing of US LNG
- Defend the existing EU Methane Regulation and ensure a strong and robust implementation that applies to imports
- Support the First International Conference on the Just Transition Away from Fossil Fuels, organized by the governments of Colombia and the Netherlands

Sincerely,

Español

Carta abierta

Resistamos al imperialismo impulsado por los combustibles fósiles. ¡Solidaricémonos con América Latina y Groenlandia!

Estimados líderes de la Unión Europea:

Europa se enorgullece de ser líder en la defensa del derecho internacional y la democracia, en la protección de los derechos humanos y en la lucha contra el cambio climático. La UE también ha sabido responder con voz clara y medidas contundentes a las ambiciones imperialistas y la agresión militar del presidente Putin. Ahora debe adoptar una postura igualmente firme frente a las de Trump.

Es una amarga verdad a la que debemos enfrentarnos, pero, lamentablemente, Estados Unidos ya no es un socio de buena fe en la histórica alianza con Europa.

La promesa de Trump de apoderarse, incluso por la fuerza, de Groenlandia es solo uno de los muchos acontecimientos escandalosos recientes que ilustran que el actual Gobierno estadounidense no es aliado de Europa.

Sus ataques ilegales contra Venezuela para tomar el control de sus recursos petroleros representan una clara violación del derecho internacional y solo han agravado la ya grave crisis democrática, social y económica del país. Estas acciones fueron seguidas inmediatamente por sus amenazas imperiales hacia Cuba, Colombia y México. Trump también ha dejado claro su desprecio por el derecho internacional a través de sus ataques a la ONU, el abandono del Acuerdo de París y las sanciones ilegales e injustificables a ciudadanos europeos (como el excomisario de la UE Thierry Breton y la relatora especial de la ONU Francesca Albanese).

El dominio de un socio es, lógicamente, la sumisión de otro. En su búsqueda de la «dominancia energética» de Estados Unidos, Trump presiona a la UE para que diluya sus propios compromisos climáticos y se comprometa a acuerdos comerciales que enriquecen a las empresas estadounidenses de combustibles fósiles y afianzan su propio poder a costa de la UE. Su administración ha atacado la normativa sobre metano de la UE y su Directiva sobre la diligencia debida en materia de sostenibilidad empresarial, con el fin de debilitar la capacidad de Europa para exigir responsabilidades a las empresas por los daños causados al clima y a los derechos humanos.

Utilizó la amenaza de aranceles económicamente devastadores para garantizar que la UE aceptara importar 750,000 millones de dólares en productos energéticos estadounidenses durante los próximos tres años, en particular su gas natural licuado (GNL). Aparte del hecho de que el GNL estadounidense es peor que el carbón y muy caro, los proyectos de GNL estadounidenses contaminan el aire y el agua de las comunidades cercanas, lo que aumenta el riesgo de cáncer, asma y otros graves problemas de salud.

Mientras la UE acceda a las demandas de Trump, estará cambiando una dependencia peligrosa por otra, renunciando poco a poco a su soberanía, perdiendo la batalla de la competitividad, agravando la crisis climática, lo que pondrá en mayor riesgo la vida de su propia población frente a fenómenos meteorológicos extremos, y poniendo en peligro sus ambiciones de ser considerada líder mundial en materia climática.

Además, se prevé que el aumento de las importaciones de combustibles fósiles estadounidenses provoque un incremento de los precios de la energía para los hogares de la UE, de los cuales hasta uno de cada cuatro ya no puede permitirse calentar, refrigerar o iluminar adecuadamente sus hogares, y expondrá a la UE a mayores niveles de volatilidad del mercado, ya que Estados Unidos ha demostrado que no es un socio comercial fiable.

Cada euro gastado en energía no renovable estadounidense y cada inversión en combustibles fósiles realizada por empresas y bancos europeos en Estados Unidos alimenta la agenda autoritaria de Trump en su país y sus ambiciones imperiales en el extranjero. La única forma en que Europa puede alcanzar la independencia energética y liberarse de las presiones externas es implementando una transición justa que abandone los combustibles fósiles y se base en la suficiencia y la eficiencia energética y en las energías renovables autóctonas. Si se hace bien, esto puede favorecer la creación de puestos de trabajo dignos y economías locales sólidas..

Ya es hora de que la UE marque una línea roja contra el imperialismo alimentado por los combustibles fósiles de Trump. Nosotros, personas y organizaciones de la sociedad civil internacionales y europeas, pedimos a la UE que se oponga con valentía a la agenda de Trump y defienda a las personas, nuestro planeta y el Estado de derecho.

La UE debería:

- Mostrar su solidaridad con las naciones latinoamericanas amenazadas por Estados Unidos y otras manifestaciones de fuerza imperial, y oponerse a todas las formas de opresión que afectan a las comunidades locales, como en el caso concreto de Venezuela.
- Mostrar su solidaridad con Groenlandia. Es su pueblo, y solo él, quien debe decidir sobre su futuro.
- Presentar una moción en las Naciones Unidas que condene las flagrantes violaciones del derecho internacional por parte de Estados Unidos.
- Cancelar inmediatamente las negociaciones y la aplicación del acuerdo comercial entre Estados Unidos y la UE
- Colaborar con los Estados miembros de la UE para renovar el Pacto Verde Europeo y establecer una hoja de ruta vinculante para la eliminación gradual del gas fósil (en particular, el GNL estadounidense).
- Colaborar con los Estados miembros de la UE para rescindir adecuadamente los contratos existentes y evitar nuevos contratos a largo plazo para la importación o financiación de GNL estadounidense.
- Defender el actual Reglamento de la UE sobre el metano y garantizar una aplicación firme y sólida que se aplique a las importaciones.
- Apoyar la Primera Conferencia Internacional sobre la Transición Justa para Abandonar los Combustibles Fósiles, organizada por los Gobiernos de Colombia y los Países Bajos.
